Not illustrated. 1912 Excerpt: . . . social development of that community--industrially, politically, intellectually and morally. To correlate education with life thru a practical system of instruction and development involving business, industry and ethical, economic and civic relations, so that the school shall be a reproduction of life, and life a continuation of the school, is the next step in educational evolution and development. Every school from the kindergarten to the university should be associated with the office, shop, factory, studio, farm, orchard and garden, in both a theoretical and practical maner; every industrial and commercial institution should have its educational department for the technical, intellectual and social improvement of its employes, and every community--yes, every school district--should have its civic institute for the study, discussion and practical consideration of every question of specific or general civic or community welfare. For purposes of the Institutional School, every school house and building, church and public hall, should be made available for education to the end that all the people--both young and old--may become directly related to the best educational development of the age and of the community. Life should not be made merely a struggle for existence, or even for the accumulation of wealth, but one continuous search for truth and the seeking to correlate it when found with the practical needs of human society by which individual character may be developed and social environment improved. To this end governmental, state, municipal and individual aid should be extended to the fullest possible extent,...
